Cotton Types (100% Cotton)

- Process: Cotton fibers are cleaned and combed through a "carding" machine to straighten them, but short fibers remain.
- Feel: Slightly rougher, coarser feel. It's durable and budget-friendly.
- Use: Common for basic, economical hoodies.
- Printing: Takes screen printing well. DTG can be good but can feel less smooth.

Ring-spun Cotton

- Process: Cotton fibers are continuously twisted and thinned, making them very fine, strong, and soft.
- Feel: Much softer and smoother than carded cotton. More luxurious feel.
- Use: Popular for mid-range to premium hoodies.
- Printing: Excellent for both screen printing and DTG, as the smoother surface allows for finer detail and softer hand feel.

Combed Cotton

- Process: Ring-spun cotton undergoes an additional "combing" process where fine brushes remove any remaining short fibers and impurities.
- Feel: The softest and strongest type of cotton due to the long, straight fibers. Very smooth and luxurious.
- Use: High-end, premium hoodies.
- Printing: Ideal for all printing methods, especially DTG, for vibrant colors and intricate details.

Terry Cotton

- Process: Characterized by loops of yarn on one side (usually the inside), and soft, flat loops on the other. It's knitted, not woven. "Fleece" is often French terry that has been brushed on the inside for extra softness.
- Feel: Absorbent, cozy, and comfortable. French Terry is lighter than traditional fleece. Brushback fleece (often called just "fleece" in hoodies) is very soft and warm due to the brushed interior.
- Use: Common for hoodies, sweatshirts, and lounge wear.

Polyester

- Exceptional Durability: Highly resistant to stretching, shrinking, and abrasion, ensuring your hoodie maintains its shape and integrity over time.
- Wrinkle Resistant: Keeps your hoodie looking neat and fresh with minimal effort.
- Excellent Color Retention: Colors remain vibrant and resist fading, even after multiple washes.
- Quick-Drying: Efficiently wicks away moisture and dries quickly, contributing to comfort.

- Common Blends:
- Natural + Natural: E.g., Cotton + Silk (softness, luster), Wool + Cashmere (warmth, luxury).
- Natural + Synthetic: E.g., Cotton + Polyester (durability, wrinkle resistance), Cotton + Spandex (stretch, shape recovery), Wool + Nylon (strength).
- Synthetic + Synthetic: E.g., Polyester + Spandex (athletic performance).
